ROAM / PRODUCT DESIGN CONCEPT

From saved places to a trip that makes sense.

A travel planner that brings inspiration, daily routes and trip changes into one place.

What inspired Roam

MY EXPERIENCE

Maps. Notes. Back to Maps.

I look up places on Google Maps, check what's nearby and write down where I want to go in Notes. Then I return to Maps to check the distances.

THE DIFFICULTY

A list is not yet a plan.

I still need to work out which places are close to each other, what order to visit them in and what can fit into one day.

THE DESIGN OPPORTUNITY

Bring the pieces together.

How might we keep saved places, distances and a daily itinerary together, so planning needs less switching between apps?

This concept began with my own trip-planning experience. Research with other travellers is a next step.

01 / THE PROBLEM

Saving places is easy.
Turning them into a plan is harder.

Travel ideas end up across posts, maps and notes. Deciding what fits into each day takes another round of planning.

02 / THE IDEA

Keep the excitement.
Make the details easier.

Roam turns saved places, a budget and a travel style into a day-by-day plan that travellers can review and adjust.

01

Discover & save

Find places you like and keep them in one collection.

02

Set trip preferences

Choose dates, budget, travel style and must-visit places.

03

Review the itinerary

Check the proposed daily route, travel time and estimated cost.

04

Adjust & keep your plan

Request a change, review it, apply or keep the original, then save.

How AI helps with planning

01 / YOU SET THE DIRECTION

Your trip, your priorities.

Saved places, dates, budget, pace and must-visits give the planner clear constraints.

02 / THE PLANNER DOES THE SORTING

A starting plan to work with.

The intended AI experience helps organise stops into daily routes and proposes changes such as less walking or a lower cost.

03 / YOU MAKE THE DECISION

Review before anything changes.

Compare what stays, what changes and the estimated cost and travel-time trade-offs. Apply the suggestion or keep your current plan.

04 / THE EXPERIENCE

Start with what you love.

Discover places, save the ones you care about and choose how you want to travel.

Design choice: separate inspiration from the practical trip details.

YOUR PERSONAL ATLAS

Good finds. Great possibilities.

Keep the places. Find your own way.

BEFORE THE ADVENTURE

Big ideas. Little details.

A few preferences. A trip that fits.

Step 3 of 3 · Your style

Matching places are prioritised when days are full.

○ Relaxed: Up to 4 stops, 9:30 am – 6 pm, an hour of downtime

● Balanced: Up to 6 stops, 9 am – 7:30 pm, a short rest after lunch

○ Packed: Up to 8 stops, 8:30 am – 9 pm, no planned downtime

Choose your travel style

05 / THE EXPERIENCE

See how the day fits together.

Move between a map, a timed list and a trip overview to understand the route and its estimated cost.

Design choice: show the same plan in the view that answers the traveller's next question.
